BOOK
OF THE WEEK

One of the most popular of Shakespeare's plays, King Lear is also one of the most thought-provoking. The play turns on the practical ramifications of the words of Christ that we should render unto Caesar that which is Caesar's and unto God that which is God's. When confronted with the demand that she should render unto Caesar that which is God's, Cordelia chooses to "love and be silent." As the play unfolds each of the principal characters learns wisdom through suffering. This edition includes new critical essays by some of the leading lights in contemporary literary scholarship.

A Deal with Our Blessed Mother Through the Litany of the Blessed Virgin Mary

Seat of Wisdom, pray for us.
Cause of our joy, pray for us.

Excerpts from: Knowledge of Mary
By: Reverend J. De Concilio

Mary must have been endowed with the very highest, vastest, quickest, and most profound intellect. It is not necessary to bring forward any proof in support of such a statement; it follows logically from the principles stated above, and would recommend itself to any mind which would reflect that God adapts the means to the end, and that Mary's mind was to be the tabernacle and receptacle of the highest supernatural wisdom. God, therefore paved the way by creating Mary with an intellect greater than which was never granted to a human creature. We shall endeavor here to give an insight into the nature and qualities of such intellect in order that we may be true to our purpose that of always representing as much as possible an adequate idea of the subject we are speaking about...

Now, we must claim for Mary the highest, quickest, broadest, and most profound intellect which was ever created, superior not only to any particular intellect, but superior to all the created intellects of mankind.

Our reason, besides the general one which we have given above, is this: God was preparing the human faculties of Mary for the office she was destined to fulfill. Now, one part of this office was the highest possible supernatural knowledge of God by infusion ever granted to any creature, not only man but angels—and, indeed, men and angels put together. Because, as the Eternal Father begets His Son by a comprehension of His infinite nature, and therefore is the latter the essential, divine Idea, the internal Word, so Mary, in imitation of that intellectual generation, having to conceive the same identical Word, was to conceive Him first in her mind by a knowledge of His infinite nature and perfection so great as to enable us to say that, as the Eternal Word was the fruit of the intellect of the Father. ✠
