EXCERPT FROM: PHILOSOPHY OF RELIGION FROM PART II, CHAPT. VI "THE TRANSCENDENCE OF GOD"

God is transcendent to the world, not only because He is Actuality whereas the world is evolving, but also because He is simple whereas the world is composite. The latter argument does not begin with the order of concepts and then pass on to existence. Its starting point is concrete existing things, and it states that the finite existence implies infinite existence, not as its exemplary cause alone, but as its creative cause. The argument may be stated in psychological language as follows: there is a quest for life, truth, and love in every human heart—not for a life that endures then years, but always; not for the truths of geography, but all truth; not for a love lasting fifty years, but always. But we find that life is mingled with death, truth with error, and love with hate. Where can we find the life, truth, and love we seek? That question can be answered by asking another question. Where is the source of light in this room to be found? Not under the table, for there light is mingled with darkness. We must go to pure light. So, too, if we are to find the source of the life, truth, and love that are in the world, we must go out to pure Life, pure Truth, Pure Love and that is the definition of God. ☩

FORMED FILM OF THE WEEK: ESTHER

A retelling of the Old Testament Book of Esther. A beautiful Jewish woman who hid her faith and heritage from the King who chose her for his queen. When her people were in danger of mortal death from the hands of the King's general, she put her life in the hands of the King in order to save them- through great faith, prayer and willingness to sacrifice and suffer for her people.

She is a great role model for all women of faith.
